Wedding of Miss Clare Gregory and D. C. Lindsay.

A HEAVY FINE FOR FIFTY CBTS.

A Kahuna Recovers Some Stolen Money by Threatening to Pray the Offender to Death—A Large Number of Summer Visitors Visit the Island—Notes.

MAUI, July 28.—A wedding in which much interest has been manifested took place last Wednesday evening at the Paia Protestant church. The bride was Miss Clare Gregory, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Loveland of Hamakua, a young lady who has always taken a leading part in society matters of Makawao. The bridegroom was David Colville Lindsay, the nephew of J. W. Colville of Paia. He is the bookkeeper of Paia plantation and has always been most popular in the social circles of the district.

The pretty auditorium was well filled with guests, not only from the different villages of Makawao, but also from Kahului and Wailuku. Messrs. W. S. Nicoll and D. Rough acted as ushers. The bride's favorite colors of pink and white predominated in the decoration of the church where pendent from the high arch a most beautiful portiere of jessamine vine looped with white satin ribbons produced a most exquisite, light, graceful and unique. The effect was ornate with silver and white peddling bell resting upon a large wheel of delicate pink roses, while the spaces on either side of the organ were filled with palms and bamboos. Roses, begonias and daisies adorned the railings, and a dainty carpet of marguerites and ferns was spread between the two aisles which were barred with gates of pink and white flowers. Just a little before 8 o'clock the strains of the wedding march proclaimed the entrance of the bridal party, who were met in the chancel by the bridegroom and his best man, Mr. C. W. Baldwin.

Heading the cortege were two tiny bridesmaids, Lottie Baldwin and Agnes Fleming, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Maud Baldwin. Then came the bride leaning upon the arm of her uncle who gave her into the keeping of the bridegroom.

After the impressive words had been spoken by Dr. E. G. Beckwith, the bridal party and many of the guests were driven to the residence of Mr. Colville, where an informal reception was held.

The parties were prettily decked with flowers and greens and a most dainty lunch was served. The presents were numerous and of exceptional elegance. Just before 10 p. m. Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay, having received the congratulations of their many friends, departed for their new home known as "The Parsonage."

STRAY SCRIBBLINGS.

H. W. Piemmer, of Wailuku, who, last week, was arrested charged with the burning of the plantation office, was committed by Judge Helekunihi during Wednesday, the 25th instant, and was released upon $2000 bail.

The summer visitors: Mrs. Forrest, of Hilo, at Mr. and Mrs. Fleming's, Grove Ranch; Rev. and Mrs. O. H. Gulick, at Dr. Beckwith's, Paia; Miss Benner, of Honolulu, at Mrs. O'g's, Paia; Miss Whittier, principal of Kihala seminary, at Maunaloa seminary; Miss Ethel Wodehouse, of Honolulu, at Mr. and Mrs. Louis von Tempy's, Makawao; Mr. Corbett, of Honolulu, at Mr. George E. Beckwith's, Haiku; Count Bismark, at W. H. Cornwell's, Waikapu; Mr. and Mrs. Gilman, Misses Mott-Smith and Seomoe, and Mr. George Martin, (a Harvard man), at Mr. H. P. Baldwin's, Haiku.

The Lahaina teachers have recently determined to continue holding meetings every Friday evening during term time. They have adopted the following books to be studied: Kellogg's Physiology, Rheinhardt's Principles of Education, Rooper's Apperception, and McMurray's Recitation.

Joe Fernandez and John Magill, two Portuguese residents of Kula, recently had a dispute about fifty cents. During Tuesday they took the case before the Makawao Court, and Joe instead of paying the half dollar to John and settling matters amicably, was put to the expense of $20 for lawyer's fees, costs, etc. And the dicky bird kept singing in the damaskola tree.

Among the visitors to Haleakala during the week were Misses Snow and Crozier, Count Bismark, and the Gilman party.

Mr. H. S. Townsend and family of Lahaina departed this week for a month's vacation in Hilo.

A new use for kahuna: Mrs. Norton, of Makawao, recently had $38 stolen from her house, and instead of applying to the police for redress she hid to a noted disciple of the "anana," Papa by name. He told her to depart from home for a time and tell everybody that she had procured a kahuna to pray the guilty party to death. The directions were followed, and, upon her return one day this week, she found the stolen money in its accustomed hiding-place under the bed.

During Thursday and Friday, at Hamakua, over a hundred applications were received for registration or for special rights by the Boards of Registration and Examiners.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson entertained a large party of young people at Olinda during Friday night, the 27th instant.

Many changes in the direction of economical management have been recently made at Spreckelsville Plantation.

No arrivals or departures in the shipping news of the week.

Weather delightful.

ON HALEAKALA.

The Description of a Trip Taken by James W. Garvin.

A great many years ago I made my first trip to Haleakala, on Maui, and such was my experience on that occasion that I will never forget it. A friend, Harold Giles, and I had agreed to make the ascent of that famous old mountain sometime and we decided that it might as well be done and over with. We had visited every valley and peak worth speaking of and always kept that Haleakala in view as our last grand climb before we left the Islands. We had lived quite a while in Wailuku, and from our veranda that grand, majestic, weird-looking mountain, 10,000 feet high and gigantic in all its proportions seemed to be daring us to make the ascent. To the people of West Maui Haleakala stands out in bold relief against the eastern sky. Shut in as they are by their own high range of mountains the sun sets to them early in the afternoon and they watch the receding light as it slowly dies out upwards along the slope of the great mountain. It is the only place I know of where the sun sets in the east. The word Haleakala has been translated House of the Sun, but I understand it as House where the Sun is lighted. From Wailuku, at a distance of about twenty miles, it presents a very symmetrical, though barren, aspect. On a bright, clear day, it is observed that its sides are scored with deep ravines, which, through a telescope, are found to be filled with a dense tropical growth of scrub koa, kukui and other trees. Generally in winter Haleakala wears a cap of snow for a few days. When this cap comes well down the sides and lasts for a few weeks, the natives assert that a good agricultural season may be expected. The slopes of Haleakala are so gentle that cultivation may be carried on half-way up to the top. Anyone in search of climate may locate himself on this mountain at such an altitude as to obtain the requisite temperature—from that of the tropics to an almost Arctic at the summit. Although the side towards Wailuku has a barren appearance, being on the leeward, that on the windward is densely covered with gigantic ohia and koa trees, and the ravines which are deeper generally carry turbulent torrents. It is from these the water is drawn to irrigate the thousands of acres of cane in Haiku, Grove Ranch, Hamakua, Paia and the islands of the Hawaiian Commercial and Sugar Company. In the days when my friend and I visited old Haleakala there was but one of these plantations (Haiku), and its output was small. As we rode across the plain which separates West from East Maui we might have discerned from the rank growth of the grass, which was up to our horses' bellies, that some day the whole would be one grand field of cane. We knew of the water supply, and were familiar with irrigating systems of other countries, but could not have foreseen that a reciprocity treaty with the United States would be made and which has given such an impetus to the sugar industry.

Stopping at Mrs. Andrews' place at Makawao we obtained a supply of provisions and her son as a guide. After a very pleasant ride of a few hours we found ourselves at the cave near the top. Here we tethered our horses and proceeded to collect a lot of scrub wood to keep a fire going all night. In the morning we were on top before sunrise and felt fully repaid for our exertions. None but a poet should attempt to describe sunrise on Haleakala. All the principal islands of the group are visible. At times they could be compared to huge toadstools, as each of them carried its load of clouds. The three mountains of Hawaii protruded from the field of fleecy clouds which covered the whole island. After chasing goats for a while and gathering some good specimens of the silver sword, a beautiful plant which is peculiar to great elevations, my friend and the guide decided to go down into the crater.

The crater is somewhat triangular shaped and its floor appeared to be covered with cone shaped hills. I determined not to make the descent as my lungs were not very strong. It is very steep and sandy, and the two men were soon at the bottom where I could see them wandering about among the hills.

Presently the clouds began to draw into the crater from the Koolau gap and the whole interior was covered at a distance of probably a thousand feet below the rim or peak on which I stood. It was a very peculiar sensation to be alone in the world. Gradually the clouds closed up toward me until the space on which I stood appeared to be no larger than an ordinary house-top.

After an hour or so, and having eaten my lunch and written my diary and sung all the songs I knew, a fearful sense of loneliness seemed to crowd upon me. I walked as far as the limits of my surroundings would allow me. I whistled and called to my comrades. I loosened boulders and set them hurtling toward the center of the crater. All means of passing time became exhausted, and I would fain have followed my friends into the crater, but knew that a slight deviation at the top would mean miles beneath. I had read of the sense of loneliness men experience who have none of their kind to talk with, but they had always the lower animals or a varied scenery. I have since heard preachers express the thought that hell was "to be alone with conscience," and I knew that no one in the audience could comprehend the thought but me. To be alone; to be the last man on a pinnacle above the overwhelming flood! No, I would sooner go down with the crowd than be compelled to endure the agony of living alone.

My friends were away from sight for four or five hours, but that was the longest four or five hours I ever spent. The solitude and loneliness of that period has burned a place into the tablets of my memory which can never be revamped. When I hear of prison discipline, I always hope that the power to isolate men shall only be put in the hands of humane men, as it is the cruellest punishment men have yet invented to inflict on their fellows. We went down to our horses and in a couple of hours were back at the village of Makawao and off for a ride to a picnic in the woods on the windward side of Haleakala, apparently forgetting all the hardship of the trip. JAS. W. GARVIN.

SOME NEW GOODS.

What Can Be Seen at the Hawaiian Hardware Company.

Each year marks an era of progress in the mercantile houses of Honolulu. Twenty years ago if a man managed to secure an oil barrel from a whale ship and cut it in two, he was satisfied to use it for a bath tub. An improvement upon the oil barrel was the zinc tub—for years used by the majority of house-owners.

During one of the trips of Mr. Hendry, President and Manager of the Hawaiian Hardware Company to the United States, he saw samples of the enamel bath-tubs, sinks, closets, etc., made by the Standard Manufacturing Company. With this enterprising business house, to see is to obtain, so that today in its showrooms may be found some of the handsomest enameled tubs ever turned out of a factory. These comprise the plain sort with hardwood rims and nickel trimmings, and those of the more expensive pattern, having rolled steel rims and handsome bronze panels. They have some beautiful specimens of wash stands with the Tennessee marble top, wedgewood basins, handsomely decorated. All of the faucets, chains and plugs in these goods are heavily plated with nickel. From an examination given them, it seems impossible for them to get out of order.

The Hardware Company has in addition to this large stock of enameled ware, enamel-lined pipes for plumbers' use. These pipes; being enameled on the inside are proof against refuse collecting or stopping them; being practically the same as a piece of China, it is impossible for any matter to collect.

The sale of this line of goods by the Hawaiian Hardware Company has grown to such proportions that it is necessary to duplicate orders by nearly every steamer.

The goods are now on view at the Company's store. A visit will repay anyone interested.

DEATH OF GEORGE COURTNEY.

He Expires Suddenly on Board of the Steamer Mikahala.

George Courtney, an old employee of the Inter-Island Company, died suddenly on last Friday morning, on board of the steamer Mikahala, while the vessel was off the coast of Niihau. He had just returned to the boat after spending an hour on shore. When he reached the steamer he complained of a severe pain in the region of his heart, and a few moments later he commenced to throw up blood. He then dropped to the deck and expired in a few moments.

Captain Haglund immediately left for Waimea where the body was afterwards interred, the funeral expenses being paid by the Inter-Island Company. The deceased had been ailing for some time. He was born in Martha's Vineyard, Mass., and was about 52 years of age. He leaves a son in this city. He was formerly a quarter-master on the steamer W. G. Hall and was considered a very good steamboat man.

Patriotism.

Madame Carnot, in assigning a reason for her refusal of the offer of a pension from the French Republic, expressed herself with such dignity and displayed so lofty a spirit of patriotism that her words deserve to be impressed upon the memories of all lovers of their kind. She said:

"The children and I thought that France, by unanimously according magnificent national obsequies to M. Carnot, paid him the supreme and only homage worthy of the country and himself."

Madame Carnot is of kin with the noble patrician matrons of ancient Rome.—Ex.

Scrofula Humor

"Until my boy was six years of age he was from birth a terrible sufferer from scrofula humor. Sores would appear on him and spread until as large as a Dollar and then discharge, followed by others, so that the larger part of his body was one mass of sores all the time, especially severe on his legs and back of his ears and on his head. The humor had a very offensive odor, and caused

Intense Itching
We cannot tell how that poor boy suffered in all those years. Physicians did not effect a cure. At last I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, as my druggist recommended it. In about two weeks the Sarsaparilla began to have effect. The sores commenced to heal up; the flesh began to look more natural and healthy. Then the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles he was entirely free from sores, having only the scars to show where they had been. These have all disappeared. We are unable to express our thanks for the good

CASTLE & COOKE.

The fact of our selling Standard Oil Company's Pearl Oil at $1.90 per case, delivered, has brought many customers to our store for oil only. We can afford to sell it at that price—you buy it because it's cheap, and at the same time walk away with the idea that our other goods must be higher in proportion to make up for lost margins in oil—that is where you are mistaken. We sell goods at a small profit—that is the secret of the whole business and means simply this to you: it's to your interest to buy of us. Enough said! All the oil we have been selling has not been consumed in lamps. Oil stoves have had their share of it—and speaking of oil stoves, there has never yet been found a more convenient, economical housewife's friend. You can cook almost anything on them and when it's done, turn out your light. No smoldering fire, no smoke, and no heat; they are a convenience no well regulated home should be without. We have them all sizes styles and prices; they are really worthy of your taking the trouble to inspect them.

Cooking utensils, you all use. We carry everything known in that line and many new things you don't know about. Call and see them.

In the future, it is our intention to remind you of some of the necessary things you need and the advantages we are offering. We will discuss it right here in this column from week to week, so kindly keep your eyes on CASTLE & COOKE.

NOTICE—Call at our store and get the new official Tramway Time Table; they are presented with our compliments, and are the most useful and complete ones ever issued.
